

Visual Estimates

It can be difficult to guess what a wind power project is going to look like in your community. The following images can help you get an idea of how much of the turbine will be visible, and from where.

Much of the area is forested, and the turbine itself is placed slightly behind the highest elevation. The most visible sightlines will be from cleared areas, or across Bras d'Or Lake. The images shown were chosen as examples of 'high visibility' views. From most local areas, the turbine will be obscured by trees or hills.
