

Visual Estimates

It can be difficult to guess what a wind power project is going to look like in your community. The following images can help you get an idea of how much of the turbine will be visible, and from where.

Since turbines are very tall they can usually be seen from a great distance away. While this turbine will be visible in many areas of the surrounding community, the large separation distances to dwellings will help prevent it from dominating the view in populated areas

View 1

View 3

View 2

